SETTLEMENT OF INDEMNITY QUARREL LOOMS AS GERMAN RESISTANCE IS ABANDONED

Early Victory for French in Ruhr Is Predicted—Control of 26 Per Cent of Mines and Factories Sought by Poincare Government—Great Britain Expected to Assume Role of Confidential Mediator in Reparations Negotiations

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 — Almost overnight has the spirit of hope and encouragement with reference to the European outlook come over official Washington.

The news that Germany is about to cease passive resistance in the Ruhr is accepted as due in large part to the influence of Great Britain. Being unable herself to force a recession of the French viewpoint by public exchanges of notes, Britain is believed to have persuaded the Germans to retreat. This maneuver would tend to remove the chief obstacle set up by the French against negotiating a Ruhr settlement and make the atmosphere more favorable to mutual concessions.

The break in the Ruhr situation is not due to any sudden realization by Germany that passive resistance was a wrong policy but to a knowledge that France was determined to go thru to the bitter end and that the support of Britain was of little value unless the British were ready to take drastic steps, something to which powerful influences inside the British empire were vigorously opposed.

For many weeks the American government has been aware that beneath the surface negotiations were proceeding between the industrialists of all European powers with a view to effecting a settlement. The rumors that the industrialists have reached an agreement comes significantly at the same time that word goes forth from Berlin of the prospective end of passive resistance.

There have been well defined reports from Paris for sometime that if the German industrialists would agree to permit the acquisition by French interests of 26 per cent of some of the larger

Martins Ferry Man's Expense Included Sole Leather and Handshakes

MARTINS FERRY, O., Sept. 12—Charles "Tobe" Barr, defeated at the recent primaries for Councilman here, in filing his expense account of receipts and expenditures, as required by Ohio laws, displayed a meticulous honesty sometimes lacking in those who attain high office. Perhaps that's why he lost. Anyhow, here is his statement, as filed with the Election Board—

PROSPECTIVE BRIDE WAITS FOR FATHER'S CONSENT IN COURT

Chloe Hawkins, 20, daughter of Andrew Hawkins of Spring Mountain, was obliged to sit in the probate judge's office for two hours Wednesday morning, while her husband-to-be, Ralph Akins, hurried back to Spring Mountain to get her father, so he could sign their application for a marriage license.

Because Miss Hawkins was under 21 years of age, the consent of both her parents was necessary before she could obtain a license. Her mother had accompanied her to Coshocton, but her consent was not sufficient.

The law fixing a girl's majority at 21, and denying her the privilege of obtaining a marriage license without the consent of her parents, until she reaches that age went into effect in July.

Frequent delays in the issuing of licenses have been caused by the failure of prospective brides to remember the provision of the law, Judge Ely said Wednesday.

Akins is 22. He is a farmer, and claims Spring Mountain as his residence.

HENRY WOLFE TELLS KIWANIANS WHAT HE LEARNED IN RUSSIA

Henry Wolfe, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wolfe, of north Fourth-st, entertained local Kiwanians at their regular meeting at the Park Hotel, Wednesday noon, with an account of his observations in Russia and 14 other European countries, while he was serving with the Nansen Relief Expedition.

He has just returned from Greece.

The Nansen Relief Expedition received no honest cooperation in Russia, he declared. It differed from the Hoover expedition, in that the head of the expedition had no contract with the Bolsheviki government, and could command no assistance.

There is no enlightened political opinion in Russia now, he said, because of the dense ignorance of 90 per cent of the population. The Bolsheviki number only about 500,000 out of a hundred million people he said.

They have control of the government, however, and are working out the salvation of the country in their own way. In the larger cities he said there was a noticeable improvement from the time he first arrived in Russia until he left. The Bolsheviki plan of government is so revolutionary that the outside world can hardly understand it, Wolfe declared, but he said there was no doubt but what they were working in a definite direction.

Lenine is a Russian and Trotzky is a Jew, and they are supposed to represent the conservative and radical wings of the government, Wolfe said, but their plan of action is almost identical. A counter revolution, in Wolfe's opinion, is impossible. The people of Russia who would be most likely to revolt are too ignorant to succeed he declares and it would be extremely difficult for an outside country to organize a revolution.

Wolfe visited every country in Europe during his trip.

The Kiwanians will observe next week as "Constitution Week" and have received a request from the state fire marshal to observe the week of Octobr 7 as "Fire Prevention Week."

EXCELLENT STOCK SELLS REASONABLY AT KEENE TUESDAY

As in the case of former sales held by the Keene community sale company a lot of livestock of very high quality was offered by the Keene men in their sale Tuesday afternoon. No better grade, perhaps, of cattle and sheep has been sold at Keene than that which went thru the sale Wednesday.

The usual large number of represenative stockmen, from various parts of this county, as well as from Holmes, Wayne and Stark counties, was in attendance.

Five hundred head of sheep sold at figures commensurate with today's markets. Samuel Franks, of Millersburg and William Karr, of Keene took the wethers at prices ranging from $4.50 to $6.00 per head. Seventy good Shropshire lambs went to Myron Lawrence, of Keene at $4.50. One hundred and twenty-five head of extra good Delaine lambs fell to the bids of Anthony Lennon and William Karr at $4.90 and $5.10, respectively. Several pens of fine-wooled ewes sold at prices ranging from $4.10 to $5.05.

Bids on some of the cows were a bit disappointing to the consigners, in consideration of the high quality of the animals offered. The top price was $94 for an excellent polled Jersey cow, by Walter Agler, of Wilmot. The twenty-five cows sold went at an average of $65. Samuel Franks, Walter Agler, Glenn Harrah, Myron Lawrence and Fred Olinger took several of the best cows.

The sale totaled around $5,000. N. W. Barrett sold the stock.

COBLENZ, Sept. 12. — "Germany's policy of paying Ruhr workers on condition they loaf is the cause of the disastrous plunge of the mark," President Tirard, of the French high commission in the Rhineland, told the International News Service today.

"The population is beginning to realize that heavy burdens were unnecessarily imposed by Berlin in order to carry on passive resistance. Now the people are menaced by famine.

"The commission is doing everything possible to relieve conditions and avert starvation. I just held a conference with representatives of 30 cities including Manhiem, Treves and Coblenz. HIGHWAY CLUB TO HOLD A MEETING THURSDAY NIGHT

The Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean Highway Club of Coshocton-co will hold a meeting in the offices of the Home, Building & Loan Co., Thursday evening for the purpose of electing delegates to the annual state convention of the highway association.

The date for the state convention has not been definitely decided upon, but it will be held about the middle of October according to information received by W. B. Lynde, chairman of the local organization.

The club will elect a delegate to represent every town on the highway in this county. In addition, seven committeemen will be elected, to constitute the new county board.

At the state meeting this year a plan will be worked out whereby the county committeemen will take on some definite work, looking to the early completion of the highway clear across the state, and especially help work out a good connection with West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

It is pointed out that the connection between those two states will have much to do with increasing the volume of traffic over the P. P. O. O. highway.

Gamesters, Beware! Bank Breaker is Coming

Pucinelli, Who Broke the Bank at Deauville, Now Has Designs on Monte Carlo, But First Plans Visit to United States

(By LUTHER A. HUSTON)

LONDON, Spt. 12 — This is the story of the man who "broke the bank at Deauville."

It is the tale of a young Englishman who gambled for ten days in the Deauville Casino and quit the game with 1,500,000 francs—about $75,000 in United States coin.

Charles Pucinelli, the Englishman in question, who has spent several years in America, was hanging around Deauville, getting more bored with the place every minute. So one day, just to end his ennuil, he wandered into the Casino and languidly tossed a few francs on the gaming table.

Then the fun began.

"Before I realized it," said Pucinelli, when he arrived in London with a suitcase bulging full of franc notes, "I began playing fairly heavily and I had dropped about 170,000 francs at cherrin de fer. Toward the end of the second day, however, we switched to baccarat and then my luck turned.

"I made 240,000 francs in one bank having the surprising luck of twelve winners in succession.

"The chemin de fer stakes were limited to 20,000 francs, but there was no limit with baccarat, so I

TERRIFYING EXPERIENCES IN EARTHQUAKE AND FIRE TOLD BY REFUGEES AT SHANGHAI

WARSHIP STRIKES FREIGHTER IN FOG OFF PT. ARGUELLO

Third Naval Accident in Same Locality Within A Week

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12. Ploughing thru a heavy sea and dense fog off Point Arguello light at 6:55 o'clock this morning, according to word received today at Los Angeles harbor by the Radio Corporation of America. The crash occurred within 14 miles of the rocks where seven United States destroyers went on rocks Saturday night and within 50 miles of where the Pacific mail steamer Cuba also crashed on Saturday.

The message from the Steel Seafarer stated that a large hole had been punched in her side by the battleship's armored prow. The Texas' navigators, evidently catching sight of the Steel Seafarer just before the crash as she loomed out of the fog, reversed the battleship's powerful engines, narrowly averting a third total disaster in the same locality within a week. The Texas is believed to have escaped serious damage because of the heavy belt of armor protecting her.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12. — The collision of the Battleship Texas, on the Pacific coast today is the second accident to the vessel since she was commissioned in 1914, according to naval officials. At the beginning the World war, the Texas went aground on Long Island, but was not seriously damaged. She later became a part of the allied gradn fleet in European waters.

The Texas left San Francisco yesterday with several other warships for San Pedro.

She carries a crew of about 1,400 men.

The navy department received its first news of the Point Arguello collision from International News Service.

Young Welch was married to Miss Beatrice Norman, daughter of Emery Norman, of West Lafayette several months ago. The Welch family came from Illinois and settled at Orange last fall.

The body is expected to arrive from Everett, Pa. Thursday evening. The funeral arrangements had not been made late Wednesday.

Woman Saves Lives of Family by Standing in Doorway — Refugees Slain on Roads by Jap Bandits—Medical Aid for Injured and Dying Unavailable

SHANGHAI, Sept. 12.—Harrowing stories of narrow escapes from death and injury in the fearful earthquake and fire disaster of Japan continue to be told by numerous refugees arriving here almost daily from the stricken cities of Yokohama and Tokio.

Mrs. F. R. Carroll, wife of the Tokio manager of the Goodrich Rubber Co. and her two children had a narrow escape from death when the Temple Court hotel at Tokio collapsed over their heads, killing and injuring several other guests.

At the very start of the terrific vibration, Mrs. Carroll snatched her children and took refuge within a doorway, while the hotel building fell in ruins about them.

"I remembered the advice my mother gave me, on what to do during an earthquake," Mrs. Carroll told I. N. S. today.

"My mother went through the San Francisco earthquak and owes her life to the fact that she stood under a doorway while the California metropolis went to the street level."

Plaster, pictures, beams and other material crashed around Mrs. Carroll and her two children with a terrific roar and piled into dusty heaps of debris all about the doorway, but without one single bit of flying wreckage striking either of the three sheltered people. Mrs. Carroll's prompt action undoubtedly saved the lives of the little family. After the destroying first shock was over, Mrs. Carroll and her children dug themselves out of the Temple Court ruins and spent the night in one of the city parks.

Another refugee who made a miraculous escaped is S. R. Murphy of San Francisco who was a guest at the Imperial hotel at Tokio when the Japanese capital was shaken to its doom.

Commenting on his experiences thru the fearful disaster, Murphy said:

"The shock was terrific. In an instant everything began to col-

"Is the Farmer Keeping Pace With Men of Other Occupations, in General Knowledge and Business Ability?" was the principal topic discussed at a well attended meeting of Franklin grange Tuesday evening.

DISARMAMENT NOT CERTAIN ROAD TO UNIVERSAL PEACE, DECLARES ENGLISH AUTHOR

BY LUTHER A. HUSTON.

LONDON, Sept. 12—International disarmament does not necessarily mean world peace, in the opinion of F. Britten Austin, well known British novelist and publicist.

Austin in an interview, strongly attacked the contention of Ramsay MacDonald and other leaders of the British Labor Party, that labor's plan to call a world conference to discuss disarmament would avert war. He scored the views of the labor leaders as being fatal to the maintenance of the British Empire

"MacDonald tells us," said Austin, referring to a recent speech in Parliament by the labor chieftain, "that we are threatened with another war. He tells us that the Labor Party, and only the Labor Party, knows how to avert this war

"That is a very interesting statement and one waited with natural impatience for some hint on MacDonald's exclusive recipe. And this is what he said—

"'Patriotism is not enough It is quite true that the mere existence of a nation might be kept by military expenditure, but the mere existence of a state is not an end in itself. The existence of a nation is only justified in so far as that nation means the moral and intellectual qualities of its own people and means a great moral lead to the other nations of the world.'

"Now this," continued Austin, "if it means anything at all means that the Labor Party is [illegible] concerned with keeping the British nation in existence. [illegible] logically a little further MacDonald's recipe for averting this terrible and imminent war is NOT TO FIGHT AT ALL.

"It takes two parties to make a war. When one of them is unresisting the result is called simply a massacre. And if we should be massacred it will merely mean that our 'great moral lead to all the other nations of the world' was somehow not moral enough.

"Boiled down, the Labor Party's recipe for averting another war is 'disarm.' If you are not armed you cannot fight. So there won't be a war. There may be a massacre, but emphatically there won't be a war.

"This recipe might make old-fashioned people a trifle uneasy, but MacDonald blandly assures us that our continued existence is not an end in itself, so why worry

"Now all this is very amusing, but it is at the same time very serious. In England today the Labor Party is the official opposition, and the essential quality of an opposition is that it is both fit and ready to provide an alternative Government. But if the Labor Party came into power and put into practice the principles it so loudly proclaims that would be an unmitigated disaster Quite a lot of other nations respect our 'moral qualities,' but not quite in the way they respect a big gun"

DAILY NEWS LETTER

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers At Home and Abroad

BY KENNETH HARRIS.

CHICAGO, Sept 12 — The uniformed traffic officers' days on South Michigan avenue here are numbered. Gone will be the shrill blasts from the tiny whistles and the dignified officer standing at the intersections. Looming up in the distance as a stat[illegible] more. A tower signal system will supplant the pompous "cops."

The system is to be put thru a series of experiments, however, before the officers are removed, to insure effective operation, according to J. F. Foster, general superintendent of park commissioners. The system will extend over a stretch of nineteen blocks—from Lake street to Twenty-second street, on "Mich Boul."

The signals used will be similar to those observed generally by railroads When a green light flashes that will be a "go" signal and a red light "stop." An orange light will be an "intermediate" signal—an indication that a change of traffic is about to be made The system's signals will be just the opposite of those now in use at New York City On Fifth avenue there, for instance, an amber signal indicates that the Fifth avenue traffic is to "go," and when the green light flashes it means that the Fifth avenue traffic is to "stop" and the cross street traffic is to have the right of way The flashing of a red light is by way of announcing that a change in the "flow" of traffic will be made shortly afterward

The various signals will be operated by an automatic system from three towers along the boulevard here

Violators of traffic laws, however, still are quite likely to find themselves within the clutches of the law. A policeman will be stationed at all of the crossings for cases of emergency and to see that motorists do not attempt to "beat the signal." Each tower light can be controlled from the base by an officer, and this will enable emergency changes in handling the traffic, such as to allow passage of fire department equipment or other special vehicles. The timing of changes in the traffic will be determined by the amount of traffic then passing.

COSHOCTON, ZANESVILLE AND MANSFIELD TO DECIDE PENNANT

Coal prices from Survey of Current Business, February 1923.
Cement prices from U. S. Geological Survey.
Wages, from November (1922) Monthly Labor Review, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

More for Your Money

Swapping things—as when our grandmothers traded eggs for calico at the cross-roads store—gives a better understanding of values. By measuring one thing against another we too can often judge values more clearly.

Coal and wages make up more than half the manufacturing cost of cement.

The chart above shows price fluctuations for portland cement, coal and wages during the past ten years. In each case 100 is used to represent 1913 figures, by the Government departments which compiled these statistics.

Translated into "eggs and calico" language, this chart shows that a ton of coal would buy nearly twice as much cement in 1922 as in 1913. A day's wages also would buy more cement in 1922 than in 1913.

This means that even though coal and wages make up more than half its manufacturing cost, cement is now relatively lower in price than either coal or wages.

So, considering these increased costs, it is plain that in buying cement you get more for your money than before.

LEAGUE PENNANT CONTENDERS ARRANGE ELIMINATION SERIES TO END MIDDLE OF OCTOBER

HOW THEY STAND

EASTERN OHIO

Clubs	Won	Lost	Pct
COSHOCTON	17	6	739
Zanesville	18	8	692
Mansfield	15	9	625

With the Coshocton Regulars leading the league by a game and a half, the pennant will be decided with games among Zanesville, Mansfield and Coshocton within the next three weeks.

Zanesville and Coshocton will begin their great struggle for first place on Sunday at Zanesville. The Greys and Regulars will play a five game series, which begins this Sunday. The second game of the series will be played Sunday, September 23 at Coshocton. On Sunday, September 30 both Coshocton and Zanesville will invade Mansfield in a tournament. All three teams play as Mansfield still has a chance to win.

Zanesville will play the opening game with Mansfield and Coshocton will tangle with the Great Americans in the second tilt. If Mansfield wins both games, she will have a crack at the winner of the Zanesville-Coshocton series. If the Great Americans lose one game or both she will be out of the race and the Coshocton Zanesville elimination series will be continued.

While Zanesville and Coshocton are playing their first two games of the series before September 30, Mansfield will be playing some other league team.

The Zanesville Times-Recorder has the following digest of the situation in Wednesday's issue

In order to decide which club really is entitled to lay claim to the Eastern Ohio league championship, President Scott of Newark called a meeting of the three leading contenders in that city for a conference to determine how they wished to take care of the many postponed games on the schedule.

Messrs. Guthrie and Neighbor represented Coshocton, Pollock and Steiner represented Mansfield, and Manager Reilly looked after Zanesville's interests.

There have been many postponed games in the league this summer on account of rain, and for various other reasons, and it was for the purpose of settling this matter that the meeting was called. Under existing conditions, no one club could honestly lay claim to the pennant, no matter which one had the highest percentage at the close of the season, as the schedule has been so badly "shot" that it would [illegible] for any one of the three leading clubs [illegible] ton, Zanesville or Mansfield to claim the honor.

Therefore in order to decide which club really is entitled to the right to call themselves champions at the close of the season, the following agreement was [illegible] between the three clubs, which [illegible] also satisfactory to the other [illegible] of the circuit.

As Coshocton and Zanesville have almost proven beyond all reasonable doubt that they are the logical contenders for the [illegible] they will play a series of five [illegible] between them, first game [illegible] in Zanesville [illegible] Sunday. On the following Sunday the Greys will go to [illegible] for the second game of the series.

Mansfield had an outside [illegible] to win the bunting [illegible] had finished according to schedule, so it was further agreed that both Coshocton and Zanesville should go to Mansfield on Sunday, Sept. 30, to stage a "tournament." Zanesville will first tackle Mansfield on that date. Then as soon as it is game is completed, Mansfield will take on Coshocton. Should Mansfield win both games in one afternoon from the two higher place clubs it will entitle her to a crack at the winner of the Coshocton Zanesville series. On the other hand, if Mansfield loses one or both contests of the "tournament," she will be classed as out of the running, and the five game series between Zanesville and Coshocton will be continued the following Sunday according to agreement, until one or the other has won three games, and the club that is successful will be officially considered the "Eastern Ohio 1923 Champions."

Such arrangement [illegible] meet with the hearty approval of the fans of the cities interested, especially Zanesville and Coshocton where much rivalry appears to exist at the present time. It will give the followers of each club an opportunity to see some high class and interesting baseball before the curtain is finally rung down. These two clubs appear to be very evenly matched, if one is to judge by past performances, and every contest should prove a regular "little world's series" in itself.

It also should prove very beneficial in a financial way to all three clubs. No team in the league has made a cent this season; but on the other hand most of them have dropped quite a sum. Messrs. Reilly and Wittelmann of the Zanesville club have been going it lone-handed this season, and they deserve all the financial aid that can be given them. Without their efforts, Zanesville would have been without baseball entirely.

The coming series will be conducted on the same plan and under the same rules as those governing a world's series. None of the three clubs participating will be allowed to use any player except those now members of their respective teams and in good standing.

If a fifth game between Coshocton and Zanesville is necessary to decide the winner, the site for that game will be decided by the toss of a coin.

The other [illegible] of the league have the right to do as they please about the remaining games [illegible] between them. It will give them a chance to play off [illegible] teams, which no doubt would be more of a drawing card now that the clubs of the Eastern Ohio league [illegible] Their positions in the race are all practically settled, and to go on and play out the schedule would, no doubt, mean a financial loss to them as [illegible] near over and none of them have anything at stake [illegible] materially benefit [illegible] during the race.

We believe [illegible] representation of the [illegible] Coshocton and Zanesville [illegible]

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

ZANE GREY TO WRITE FOR BOY SCOUTS

The [illegible] of the blood and thunder story [illegible] past. But according to James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, the day of the secret [illegible] is doomed. "The normal [illegible]," says Mr. West, "wants mystery and detective stories and 'thrillers.' But it is to [illegible] the normal boy wants to read stories that have a bad taste in his mouth and a guilty feeling in his mind. Certainly the experience of the Boy Scout Movement is substituting organized gang activities, under a trusted leader as a substitute for street-corner gang life, just fits the belief that boys prefer their fun and adventure in a wholesome form."

Mr. West is in position to test out his convictions along this line, for $100,000 has been placed at his disposal to make Boys' Life, the Boy Scouts' magazine, the kind of a magazine he thinks will satisfy every normal boy. So he is going to it. The October number contains a round dozen "he-boy" stories and a wealth of serious articles on many subjects.

In November among the top notch features will be Zane Grey and Douglas Fairbanks. These are names that always make boys prick up their ears. Grey's stories are being shown on the screen. He uses a solid steel pen and writes with human blood. His stories for boys will be genuine dime-novel stories but with all the vicious qualities of the "dime novel" left out, and with all of the man-building qualities of Zane Grey's stories left in.

All this is good news for boys—and for their parents and teachers. What is being done, Mr. West says, "is in harmony with the Program of Scouting, namely, to give the boy as nearly as possible the kind of stories he likes to read, under such conditions as to make his reading wholesome as well as interesting. It is upon this basis that we have been maintaining our reading program from the beginning, and are publishing a monthly magazine for boys. Boys' Life has already established itself and has something over 100,000 regular readers now. So the $100,000 will be used to build upon a firm foundation of earned popularity, a monthly library of stories and articles that will be in relation to every boy's reading wants, what the [illegible] Scouting Program [illegible] for personal adventure, romance and achievement.

[illegible] it was a wise move on the part of the three leading clubs and President Scott. It looks like the [illegible] the league. It should prove of benefit to fans, club owners and the players on the competing teams. Surely no one can take exception."

[illegible] will welcome [illegible] part. The [illegible] proves this. We believe Zane[sville] fans will [illegible] an important event."

On with the series."

A SENSATIONAL SINGER COMING.

A quarter of a century or more ago, all of America and England was longing to be within sound of the voice of BLACK PATTI, so called because of her color and her favorite comparison as to vocal charm with the famous and renowned Adelaide Patti, the opera singer.

Marguerite Jackson is as black, as dark complexioned as she can be, for she is a member of the negro race, but her voice—oh such a voice. If you could hear her singing without looking at her you would declare you were near to one of the famous opera singers of the day. The press notices and reviews where she has appeared, voluntarily refer to her as the Galli Curci, the Tetrazini of the black race. She is deserving of these compliments.

The Harvey Minstrels advertise her as "The Modern Black Patti". With her husband, this remarkable singer constitutes one of the features of the celebrated vaudeville section of the Harvey Minstrels. Special scenery is provided for the act and this modern Black Patti is first revealed as a poorly but neatly dressed country colored girl, attracted to a transient show company. When she applies for a position, the manager asks her to demonstrate her voice, and then—and then the audience which has been swamped with a battery of negro wit, comicalities and vaudeville realizes the surprise that is in store for them and are sure to depart from the theatre satisfied that it was well worth the price of admission to hear "Marguerite Jackson, the Modern Black Patti."

Harvey's Greater Minstrels play at the 6th Street Theatre, Saturday, September 15th.

BETTY GOES FOR A STRANGE RIDE

BETTY stood at the window watching her mama and daddy gallop out of the yard and down the road.

"I'll certainly be glad when I'm big enough to go horseback riding!" Betty sighed, when a tiny laugh startled her.

Turning around, she discovered Gocomeback, the little travel elfin, standing at her side, a broad grin on his face. Betty's frown left her face and she greeted Gocomeback with a smile.

"You see, without my knowing it, you can't frown!" he laughed. "I was just going for a ride myself and stopped to take you with me."

Before Betty could ask where he was going she was whisked through the air, and when they lighted once more on the ground she found herself standing in a strange country.

The houses were built of reed and thatched with palm leaves. Most of them were built high above the ground on bamboo poles. Under the houses the ponies, chickens and hogs slept, and when it rained—so Gocomeback told Betty—the children played there.

A little brown girl and her brother, both dressed in long, loose trousers that looked just like pajama suits, came out to meet them.

Gocomeback introduced them to Betty, and they at once invited her to go with them to visit the rice fields.

The little brown boy ran under the house and soon returned riding a queer looking animal.

It was about the size of Bossy, Betty's pet cow, with great big horns and thin hair, which stood out all over its body like bristles on a pig's back.

"Gracious me!" Betty laughed when he came up beside them. "What kind of a creature do you call that?"

"A water buffalo," replied the little brown girl. "The best worker we have in all the Philippine Islands."

They helped Betty and Gocomeback to climb upon the broad back of the animal, and the two brown children trotted at their sides off to the rice fields.

"Perhaps you don't know it," said the little brown girl, "but all this rice was transplanted into this muddy field. My father planted the seed grains in small beds, and when they grew into tiny plants he transplanted them into this field. You see, to grow rice into nice big grains rice plants need lots of water, and these fields are flooded from time to time to keep them very wet."

Betty looked at the waving yellow stalks and thought of the lovely white grains of rice she had had for her dinner that day.

Gocomeback and Betty rode over the fields while the children cut the rice stalks down, and when Gocomeback said it was time to run home Betty was disappointed.

When she told her mama and daddy where she had been and how she had been water-buffalo riding they had a good laugh. They both thought she had fallen asleep and dreamed it all, but Betty knew better.

The Reason Madge's Heart Warmed to Mrs. Marks.

I [illegible] anxiously at [illegible] Dicky held out to [illegible] with the [illegible] that he [illegible] to the [illegible] had counted, and that [illegible] he would have to [illegible].

"What is the matter with it?" I asked. "I don't [illegible] anything. [illegible] you a trifle [illegible] prejudiced against Mrs. Marks? It appears to [illegible] faithfully."

"[illegible] would be a better word," Dicky [illegible]. "I'm not [illegible] the work," he admitted [illegible]. "She's as [illegible] I ever saw, [illegible]"

"[illegible] the trouble?" I [illegible].

"[illegible] in creases and [illegible] of Mrs. Marks [illegible] directions" Dicky [illegible] his voice heavy with [illegible] you see that [illegible] the crease near the [illegible]."

He [illegible] the fine points of [illegible] length, winding up with the [illegible] that he wouldn't wear [illegible] as they appeared to a [illegible] light.

"Just Wait——"

I understood very little of his dissertation but I grasped and was sorry for the [illegible] disappointment which had replaced the anger in his voice.

"Look here, Dicky!" I said when he had finished. "If all the rest of the pressing is all right except these creases, I believe I could take those out for you. I have pressed my own things many times. Won't you let me try?"

I purposely made my voice as coaxing as possible and Dicky looked at me dubiously, but with a gleam of something very like relief in his eyes.

"You can't make 'em any worse," he said at last, "and you might just happen to turn the trick. Here, let me show you what I mean by the right kind of creases."

"Just wait until I switch on the iron," I pleaded. "It can be heating while you tell me, and then I won't lose any time."

I did not wait for his assent, but sped down the hall to the kitchen, and, putting my ironing board between the table and a stout chair, switched on my electric iron and went back to the living room, where Dicky with the aid of what he termed a properly-pressed suit, showed me the difference between the creasings.

A Written Message.

"This sort of a thing is the top of the milk for the weekend 'young men about town,'" he said contemptuously, "but I'd rather attend that banquet in golf knickers and the upper part of a pair of pajamas, than in these things as they are now."

"I'll do my best with them," I said, "only don't come near the kitchen unless I need for you. I shall be nervous enough without any [illegible]."

"Much [illegible] I have for going anywhere," Dicky retorted. "Me for a bath and a shave! I'm going to have these whether you succeed in getting the [illegible] creases out of the clothes or not. And—you're a pretty good sport, old girl. Give us a kiss."

I returned his caress dutifully, amused by his evident belief that he had squared all accounts with the pseudo-apology. Then with the suit which Dicky had pointed out as a model of pressing over one arm, and his evening clothes over the other, I proceeded to the kitchen.

The bathroom door slammed a few seconds later, and I knew that his bath and shave would keep him out of my way for a quarter of an hour at least.

I had no conscious thought of Mrs. Marks in my ultimatum to Dicky that I did not wish him to come near the kitchen while I was working at the clothes, but when I heard her tiptoeing into the room behind me, I realized that subconsciously I had been expecting her. She had a cheap tablet of note paper and a pencil in her hand and she held the tablet out to me.

"I don't care to say nothing out loud," I read in a round childlike script, "but I couldn't help hearing, and I know what he means. Just gave me a look at the other suit, and I'll have these ready for you in a jiffy. You mustn't try them if you're not used to them. You'd spoil them."

I raised my eyes and looked at her gratefully, and with sudden, genuine liking in spite of her crudity and her doubtful surroundings. There were few women, I reflected, in any station of life, who would persist in helping out a neighbor after Dicky's criticism of her efforts which I now knew she had overheard.

That there was something behind her offer besides sheer good nature I guessed, of course, but was content to leave its discovery to the future. For the present I was only too glad to surrender Dicky's suit to her capable hands and stand silently watching her while she efficiently brought them into the form he desired.

What conflicting emotions seethe in these three hearts! How eagerly each hopes they all shall say the right thing! For in this matter of breaking the news lie mainsprings of happiness for them all—but how can any fail the others in the great moment, for all are moved by love—the love that shall grow even greater with the years!

How to Enhance Your Beauty by an Easy Massage Method

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

IF you have ever been massaged as a tonic for resting tired spirits and bringing the glow of strength and good looks back to you, you must realize what a very pleasant sensation this can be.

The wear and tear of everyday life makes its inroads upon beauty, to be sure. If you take an active part in things at all, you're bound to have your moments, and perhaps days, of tiredness and lassitude.

And this constant tired feeling, as all women know, is devastating to beauty. It gradually etches fine lines about your eyes, draws ugly deep lines from your nose to the corners of your mouth, and makes its mark in numberless subtle ways.

Sometimes it almost seems that after a woman finds herself at the age of maturity she must become resigned to seeing beauty go. For with this age come responsibilities and cares and worries. Any woman may have plenty of these disagreeable things to deal with before she reaches maturity, to be sure.

But somehow, while she is of more tender years she seems to have more power of resistance to these inroads on beauty and calmness of spirit. She has more elasticity with which to bound back from depressions and cares and worries. She forgets them and goes on to something more pleasant before they have had time to make unattractive marks.

But the woman who is ever tempted to let beauty wane without making a struggle to hold it, must remember that she can recapture this carefree spirit of youth if she will but go about it in the correct way.

She must never let cares sit so heavily upon her that she can't shake them off and take an interest in her looks. The way to coax oneself into this frame of mind is to do everything possible to feel physically fit, and after this the rest is rather easy.

Eat and sleep and exercise in the correct proportion will work wonders toward winning your battles against the ravages of time. And then the woman of individuality usually has her own pet beauty lotions which she uses to good advantage.

For instance, I'm going to give you an emollient for massage which is very valuable in strengthening your relaxed tissues and whitening and softening your skin. It acts as a tonic and a beautifier at the same time, and women who need relaxing and strengthening in order to keep their elasticity of spirit have found it most beneficial.

The ingredients are:

Oil of bitter almonds, 10 grams.
Oil of sweet almonds, 3 ounces.
Balsam of tolu, 2 grams.
Benzoin, 2 grams.
Essence of lemon, 2 drops.
Essence of cajeput, 2 drops.

Have your druggist mix this formula. Use it on your face and neck and body. If you take a refreshing bath and rub this on afterward you'll feel the weight of care leaving you, and it will be easier to forget the worries that bring lines of care into your face. In their place you can have smoothness, and a skin that is white and soft.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

Here Are Recipes for Delicious Ice Creams and Cakes.

ICE CREAM and cake is such a dependable dessert that with the modern freezer which makes freezing easy, and recipes for cakes that will keep for a day or two the problem of home desserts is not hard to solve.

Included among the following cake recipes is one that must be used on bread-making day, for it requires time and a good oven. But it is a good, old-fashioned cake and is seldom met with where modern cooking prevails.

These early fall days, after preserving and pickling are over, fire the cook with new ambition, and making an old-fashioned cake will afford an outlet for her energy.

Gooseberry Ice Cream.

Wash, top and tail a quart of ripe gooseberries and put them on to cook in a quart of water. When they are very soft, add a pint of sugar, a teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in just a little water, let them boil up and strain them. When the mixture is cool, add a pint of heavy cream, the beaten white of an egg, the strained juice of half a lemon and a little grated peel. Freeze this cream in the usual way.

Damson Plum Water Ice.

Wash, stem and seed a full quart of plums, put them in a saucepan with a pint of water, bring them to the boiling point and boil ten minutes. Add three-quarters of a pint of sugar syrup. Let the mixture boil until the plums are very soft, then put it through a sieve. Add a half teaspoonful of gelatine in a little hot water. Bring these ingredients to the boiling point, strain them, and when cool, freeze.

Watermelon Ice.

Remove the flesh from a ripe melon and squeeze the juice out of it. Add the strained juice of two lemons, a pint of sugar and a dessertspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a small cupful of water. Boil up the mixture, then strain and cool it. If desired, it may have a little coloring added to make it a deeper pink. Freeze this ice in the usual way.

Raised Cake.

Beat three eggs, sift in a half pound of flour, a half yeast cake dissolved in half a cupful of water. Mix these ingredients and set them to rise until they are foamy. Now mix with a pound of flour, a quarter pound of soft butter, a cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon and a teaspoonful of nutmeg, a pint of rich milk scalded and cooled, and last of all, the egg mixture. Mix them all well, then set them to rise overnight. In the morning add three-quarters of a cupful of seeded raisins and a dessertspoonful of vanilla, mould the dough lightly into a cake and put it into a greased pan. Let it rise to double the original size, then make it into one large or two small cakes without handling it any more than necessary. Bake this cake like bread.

Mocha Butter Cake.

Make a small cupful of very strong coffee. Add a cupful of sugar and cook it for six minutes, then set it aside. Take a full quarter of a pound of unsalted butter, blend it with a teaspoonful of cornstarch and a full half pound of confectioners' sugar, add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, then when worked smooth, work in the coffee mixture, mixing all to a smooth cream. Set this filling aside until three layer cakes made after any of the usual recipes are done and slightly cool. Then lay up the cake in the usual way. This amount of filling is enough for the outside of the cake as well as between the layers. When cool the cake becomes rich and firm, though the mocha is soft.

Old-Fashioned Currant Fritters.

To four tablespoonfuls of flour, add the beaten yolks of three eggs, a cupful of milk, a cupful of washed and stemmed currants, the beaten whites of the eggs and a half saltspoonful of salt. Mix these ingredients and drop the batter into hot fat by the spoonful, using a large kitchen spoon. Fry the fritters a delicate brown, drain them, then dust them with powdered sugar and serve them in a napkin.

YOUR HEALTH

Why You Should Be Physically Examined Now

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York,

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

SCHOOL is in session and it won't be long before bad weather will keep the children indoors. For all of us the approach of late Fall and Winter means that we must adapt ourselves to the discomforts of indoor life, without the freedom, the exercise, the fresh air and sunlight and all the other joys of Summer.

We change all our habits at this season. We wear more clothes. We use our eyes more for reading. We live in artificial light and, all too often, we breathe contaminated air.

This is the time of year when you should have a physical survey made to see if you are in proper condition to face the social and business trials of a long season. The children should be looked over to see if their eyes, ears, noses, throats, lungs and hearts are in good trim. Young and old need this Fall housecleaning just the same as the home needs it.

The National Health Council has announced its plan to persuade everybody in America to submit to a physical examination sometime during the twelve months beginning July 4, 1924. That is a splendid idea, but let's not wait till next year. Let's have the examination made now.

To figure out the "expectation of life" is one of the indoor sports of health statisticians. This is a rule which is laid down as fairly reliable: Subtract your present age from eighty. If your health is good you will probably live for more than two-thirds of the difference.

I am not tied up to that rule. It is my belief that with reasonable care there is no reason why the normal expectation of life might not be much greater than it is at present. By right living the number 100 could be substituted for 80 in the formula.

The Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service said a wise thing recently:

"Most people think of death as coming from one of the great diseases—typhoid fever, for instance. But it is not these that do the real damage. It is the hidden things that weaken your organs without your knowing it till the test comes and you find yourself defenseless.

"It is, for instance, the abscess at the root of a tooth that manufactures the pus that injures the kidneys; the infected tonsils that discharge a pus that causes rheumatism; the little lump beneath the skin that some day changes into a deadly cancer; the work that strains one's weakest spot till it gives way, when another sort of work would do no harm."

This is a good time of year to see your family doctor, oculist and dentist and be given a careful survey. There may be some disability so slight that you have hardly noticed it. Just now it is easily removed. It is a case of "a stitch in time saves nine."

In every city are clinics and dispensaries where physical examinations are made without cost. Health officials provide the facilities. No matter how poor you may be there is somebody who will gladly look you over and give you the honest advice you need.

Let us make sure we are ready for the coming Winter and for the Winter of life.

Answers to Health Questions.

Z. A. E. Q.—The veins on my hands are very prominent. Is there anything I can do to correct this?

A.—This is a natural condition in some people. Therefore, very little can be done to correct it.

P. R. Q.—I am constantly troubled with dreams, and I don't rest properly. What causes this, and what would you advise me to do.

A.—Intestinal disturbance is the usual cause of this trouble. You should eat a light evening meal and take no food after it. Do not read for at least an hour before retiring. Make sure that your sleeping room is well ventilated. For particulars about the treatment of constipation, restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Narrow Bead Bands Trim This White Satin Evening Gown.

SIMPLICITY and white satin seem to go together. With white satin that shows the heavy texture and shiny surface of this model, much trimming would be superfluous.

The only adornment, then, appears in the form of narrow beading. This is one of the smartest notes for the coming season. This beading preserves the white note. Narrow bands of it outline the neck and sleeves and drop from the girdle to below the hem. There are like panels left so they can hang loose from the frock.

If you desire a more colorful frock, yellow satin with beads of amber would be most effective.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13.

Contradictory vibrations are read from this day's conflicting planetary activities. While those in the employment of others are under auspicious rule and there may be benefits or recognition for those seeking public favor, yet these may be nullified or retarded by a low state of health or may be otherwise jeopardized by quarrels, litigation and ill-advised change. It is admonished that matters be kept well in hand in order that the propitious rulings may be permitted to hold sway.

Those whose birthday it is may attain success and advancement by strict attention to business, permitting neither health nor hasty acts to interfere with the fair auguries. Avoid change and litigation. A child born on this day may expect success, perhaps through hard work.

The entire chancel was a mass of greenery and formed a fitting setting for the nuptial service. Great pine trees were used in the extreme background, while quantities of evergreen and palms were placed about the altar. At each side tall candelabras held lighted tapers. Here the nuptial service was read by the Rev. William B. Winters, in the presence of 700 persons, relatives and friends of the bridal couple.

Mrs. Edward A Crawford, at the organ, presented a half hour program of wedding music, while David Dawson, tenor soloist sang very sweetly, "All for You," and "Oh Promise Me." To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party entered, taking their respective places at the altar. Leading the procession were the ushers, William Milligan, of Springfield, Raymond Gerkin, of Norwalk, and Elmund Wolfe and Edward Montgomery, of Coshocton Next came the Rev. William B. Winters, followed by Samuel Kirk, of Tyrone, Pa., who served Mr Barnes as best man, then the bridegroom Following came the bridesmaids, Miss Marguerite Reuter, of Fort Recovery, Miss Alice Snyder, Miss Mary Hartley Greer, of Fairmont, West Va., and Miss Mary Hunt, wearing fetching frocks in georgette, similarly made, long waisted, straight-lined, and sleeveless. The skirts of the gowns were made extremely long, in three tiers, with inserts of rose point lace to correspond with the trimming on the bride's costume. With these they wore silver slippers and silver hose and carried old-fashioned nosegays in contrasting shades. Miss Reuter wore yellow, carrying blue cornflowers; Miss Snyder wore blue and carried pink roses; Miss Greer was in pink carrying yellow flowers, while Miss Hunt, in Nile Green carried pink roses.

Miss Oneita Barnes, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, was charming in an ecru lace frock made over orchid satin, wearing silver hose and silver slippers, and carrying an armful of Killarney roses. Miss Barnes as well as the bridesmaids wore fan-shaped combs in colors to correspond with their gowns, these the gifts of the bride.

The maid of honor was preceded by little Miss Hester Meek, niece of the bride, who scattered rose-petals in the bridal path from a poke bonnet hat made of the rose printed lace. Miss Meek wore a white ruffled georgette dress and white slippers and stockings. Next came the bride on the arm of her brother, Daniel C. Meek, who gave her away in marriage Following was little Miss Jean Ransom, wearing a fluffy white georgette dress, and bearing the bridal train.

The bride was lovely in her gown of ivory bridal satin, simply made, long waisted, in long straight lines, with an extreme court train, edged in rose point lace. The medium round neck and sleeveless effect were especially becoming, with the rose point lace and pearl trimming giving the desired effect. Her tulle veil extending to the end of the court train, was attached to a coronet shaped band of the rose point lace across the brow and frilled at the back with bunches of orange blossoms hanging quite low over the ears Her only adornment was a diamond bar pin, set in platinum the gift of the bridegroom. Brides roses, showered with lilies of the valley were her flowers Following the ceremony, the bridal pair knelt on a white satin pillow where they received the benediction.

Immediately following the wedding, Mrs. J. F. Meek entertained with a formal reception at the Coshocton Town and Country club for the pleasure of 250 intimate friends and relatives. Receiving with her, in addition to the entire bridal party were: Mr. and Mrs R. N. Barnes, and Mr and Mrs Roy Erkman, of Washington, D. C Mrs. Meek wore a becoming gown of old blue chiffon, brocaded in grey, Mrs Barnes' gown of Nile green beaded georgette was especially becoming, while Mrs. Erkman was costumed in black and white sequins.

An entertaining program of music was furnished by a group of local persons during the serving of delicious ices and cakes by the presiding hostesses Great bouquets of cut flowers and masses of greenery were used in every available space thruout the club for the occasion. The dining room was especially attractive with many lighted candles and bowls of Killarney roses placed here and there.

The bride numbers her friends by the score and is equally popular among the older, as well as the younger, social set In 1919 she was graduated from the Birmingham School for Girls, at Birmingham, Pa., and later attended Ohio State University for a couple of years While there she became affiliated with Delta Gamma sorority.

Mr. Barnes was a Phi Kappa Psi at Ohio Wesleyan University and his best man, and the ushers were fraternity brothers. Since his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan in 1922 he has been associated in business with his father and uncle in the Barnes Coal and Mining Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left last evening for a ten days' honeymoon trip in the east. For her going away costume the bride wore a stunning black satin dress, with Chinese braid and trimmed in brown martin fur, close fitting black velvet hat with black lace brim, dotted with tiny red beads, and accessories to correspond Upon their return they will be at home to their friends in the Alabama Terrace, Elm-st.

Among those from out of the city attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs Roy Erkman, Washington, Pa., Miss Verne McCoy, of Cadiz, Miss Elizabeth Leech, of Steubenville, James Pierce, Dayton, Maurice Harmon, Washington, D. C., and Arthur Dorner, Akron.

was eligible to be released next month. The parole board of the prison has denied his application, announcement received here states.

Lieut. Turner was sentenced to serve eight years in the military prison after his conviction at a general court-martial that stirred army circles thruout the country. He was tried on more than 236 counts and convicted of nearly 200 of that number. His sentence was later reduced to six years, two of which he has already served.

Only 22 years of age when placed in charge of Fort Ontario as quartermaster with several thousand dollars at his disposal, the case of Lieut. Turner will go down in military history as one of the most extraordinary growing out of the war.

Fort Ontario had been a general army hospital during the war and when Lieut Turner became quartermaster there were thousands of dollars' worth of supplies in storage there. It was in the disposal of these supplies and with the disbursements of funds that the former lieutenant became involved His chief finance clerk, Frank Searles, then a civilian, confessed to making numerous forgeries and implicated the former officer as being the man who received the money from them.

Padded payrolls, forged vouchers and irregular sales were all part of the transactions of which Lieut Turner was accused. Searles was characterized as "Jim the penman" by David Carvaloh, the international handwriting expert, who was called to Oswego to identify the author of the forged documents.

A term at Fort Jay while waiting trial, his meeting with Mrs. Beverly Chew and the disappearance of two bank checks worth $63,500 were among the sensational developments of the trial. His purchase of a handsome roadster bearing his own coat of arms on the doors, from the Bull Motor Car Company of Syracuse, was also used as evidence in convicting the former officer.

As cool as the proverbial cucumber thruout his trial, Lieut Turner startled the court, comprising some of the highest officials who tried him, by becoming dramatic when his conviction was announced.

Saluting the court, he paced the floor of the court room and said—"Thank you sir, I am a soldier," and proceeded to strip his shoulder bars from his uniform. His trial consumed nearly two months.

mines and manufacturing concerns of Germany the quarrel about the Ruhr could easily be ended. Twenty-six per cent carries with it a qualified veto power over the majority under Prussian law which in some respects makes the minority holders of stock as powerful as the majority. News is expected at any moment that on some such basis have the industrialists of France gained a victory and of course behind them is the Poincare government.

The gradual decline of the mark and the certainty that if unchecked the situation in Germany should drift into the hands of the monarchists and bring about economic chaos with no particular advantage to anybody has brot the present German ministry to its senses and will no doubt have a sobering influence on the French

The belief here is that Great Britain has assumed the roll of confidential mediator and that she will be in a position to regain the trust of France and preserve the entente by the negotiations now in process. Naturally the American government is taking no active part in what is going on but is an interested and well informed onlooker. The prospect is that if the French and Germans can come to an agreement about the Ruhr and reparations, the international bankers of all countries, including America, will take an interest once more in floating an international loan. The bankers' committee which met at the suggestion of the reparations commission in Paris a year and a half ago might be asked to sit again and give an expert appraisal of German assets for the benefit of the commission.

The whole situation for the moment looks favorable to a European settlement realized it was a question of the amount of cash one had available to turn our lucky sooner or later. Things hopped along merrily with me and soon I had sufficient winnings to justify big risks, for I was now, of course, playing with the Casino's money as well as my own. My practice was to start off with about 20,000 francs, which must be put down in cash at Deauville not in counters, as at Monte Carlo.

"From the outset my luck seemed to be in, but instead of taking my winnings straight away I let them lie on the table till they totaled [illegible] francs. Then I would go not [illegible] leaving [illegible]

"As fortune not strongly [illegible] was. I risked [illegible] and then when I had a particular [illegible] I was likely to win. Then I dropped [illegible] 20,000 francs [illegible] I let double up as usual. Generally my luck consisted of winning big coups and losing small ones, so that at the end of the third day I had won 800,000 francs for the day.

"My high-water mark was reached on my fifth day, when I cleared 1,500,000 francs. Then I took one or two banks myself and they ran awkwardly for me, as they seemed to do for the other big players. I lost about 500,000 francs on the sixth day, but picked up 300,000 the following day.

"I began to find the strain rather too much, as it meant staying up practically all night at the table, so I eased off for a couple of days before hitting up the baccarat table again.

"Then three other players and myself made a big cleanup and the luck seemed to reach quite a number of smaller players as well. At the end of ten days the bank, which had started with 15,000,000 francs, had dropped about 12,000,000 and then they decided to lay off until they could get more money from Paris."

Pucinelli did not wait for the new supply of coin to arrive but bundled up his winnings and came to London. He does not contemplate going back to Deauville, but remarked that he might "have a try at Monte Carlo next time." Before trying Monte Carlo, however, Pucinelli plans to visit the United States.

Farmers Better Off

WITH wheat at or near a dollar a bushel these days it is taken for granted that the farmers are badly off. Production costs leave little or no margin of profit, an estimated surplus which foreign markets are not ready to take forbids optimism as to future prices, the goods farmers use are not cheapening materially, and altogether the condition of the agriculturist seems exceptionally gloomy in a period of comparative prosperity.

There are signs, however, that the picture is less black than it has been painted. Statistics coming from the West are not all in harmony with unfavorable inferences drawn from grain prices. Certainly there is no warrant in them for the assumption that this year has proved leaner than last year to those that plow and reap and tend their kine. On the contrary, surprising as it may be to the general public grown accustomed to the theory that current agrarian political unrest is due to low-priced harvests, the figures now available show a substantial improvement.

According to the American Farm Bureau Federation this year's crops will realize $173,000,000 more than last year's and this year's live stock and animal products combined an increase of $40,000,000. In other words, the whole industry will earn in 1923, if present forecasts are realized, $8,710,000,000, compared with $8,479,000,000, a gain of something more than a round two hundred million.

Lacking more detailed data positive conclusions cannot now be arrived at. Taking for granted, however, that the grain growers are finding poor and insufficient markets, the inference seems sound from all the facts at hand that our agricultural problem is less difficult of solution than was indicated by recent reports from the Northwest. There is no reason why farmers should persist in raising the least remunerative crops. If wheat doesn't pay other things that come out of the tilled ground or are nourished by its fruits evidently do. What the farmer needs more than anything else is reliable information about markets before he puts his seed in the ground. His friends who advise him to disregard economic law are little likely to fatten him.

The Motor Accidents Toll

A DETROIT Judge has evolved a plan for dealing with violators of the traffic laws which, in the opinion of the trade's journals, will reduce the liability of motor accidents. Offenders are placed on probation and required to take expert instruction in driving, along with instructions in the traffic laws, before being permitted to drive again.

The soundness of this plan is obvious, but the question arises as to why competent instruction in driving and as to traffic laws should have to be initiated by a court after the law has been violated and the accident has occurred? Why should not such instruction be required before the license to drive an automobile is issued?

Such instruction, it seems, ought to originate with the automobile dealer. Many dealers do a large enough business to warrant them in maintaining a staff of capable instructors. And it ought to be practicable for smaller dealers jointly to maintain such staffs.

Certainly something must be done about motor accidents. The deaths this year, it is estimated, will total 15,000, while the number injured, the insurance companies say, will exceed 1,700,000. As the Washington Post vividly puts it: "One killed in automobile accident every 50 minutes. Two hurt every minute." The toll in anguish, suffering and staggering material loss is too heavy to be borne.

There should be a law requiring a license for all drivers and providing for its forfeiture for repeated violation of traffic regulations.

Certain dealers may object to this criticism with the assertion that they already employ competent instructors. Doubtless some of them do. But purchasers of cars can testify that the dealer's interest wanes as soon as the sale is made, and the instructor usually is eager to get the novice off of his hands as soon as possible. In any event, the fact that a Judge has formulated the plan under discussion and motor journals have approved it, is conclusive evidence that automobiles are sometimes driven by persons who do not know how to drive.

The grimmer testimony of death and injury is a challenge to the automobile industry to join earnestly, even at the sacrifice of some profit, in every real effort for the prevention or reduction of motor accidents.

Some Questions for Mr. Gompers

ON LABOR DAY President Gompers, if he was correctly quoted, indorsed preparedness as an essential to the protection of one's country and the preservation of democracy. We should be grateful if he would elaborate his views by answering these questions:

If preparedness is so effective for the defense of country and the prevention of war, why did not the preparedness of Russia, France, Germany and Italy keep the peace in 1914?

What constitutes adequate preparedness? Experts are telling us that the next war will be fought with poisons, electrical forces, possibly lethal rays of light, and germs. How does one prepare for or against this sort of war?

Just how we are to be guaranteed that the army will be used for democracy at home as well as abroad? How will Mr. Gompers see to it that armies are not used to enforce anti-labor injunctions?

What is meant by "defending one's country"? Does it include the defense of the "national honor" by Mussolini at Corfu or Woodrow Wilson at Vera Cruz? If not, how shall we reform the usual standards and ideals of armies on this subject?

Finally, may not the co-operation of the workers of all nations be a better way of preserving peace than any form of preparedness? Once Mr. Gompers seemed to think so.

In his report to the A. F. of L. convention in 1907 he said:

> Labor will strive to persuade the governments of the world to establish universal, international peace, but lest these hopes be unrealized and efforts prove futile it must never be forgotten that in the last analysis the masses of the people of every country have it in their hands to exert their own giant will and power against international war, and that if otherwise thwarted they will not hesitate to exert it.

Have the workers lost that power against war?

President Gompers, unlike some preparedness advocates, is no parrot shouting phrases he does not understand. His position, ability, and long record warrant our expecting a reasoned explanation of what he regards as proper preparedness.

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. — A restraining influence has come to jazz music. It no longer blares its wild syncopation with skillets, cow bells and triangles. These days its muted strains cannot be heard beyond intimate dance floors.

Diluted jazz was inspired by the police battering ram. The New York law forbids dancing shortly after the midnight hour and a blatant band brings a raid. So violins are muted, drums muffled and horns stopped up with gold derbies.

Dancers have welcomed the change. They can whisper sweet nothings as they chase the glowing hours with flying feet. Most of the well patronized clubs these days are in private residences on quiet streets.

The decorations are soft folds of plush brocade which in addition to beautifying the places act as sound proof walls. New York is merry making with a hush. Head waiters discourage loud talking or any sudden burst of song.

In their effort to keep night fires burning in the teeth of Volsteadism they realize as never it is that "silence is golden." Cafe patrons must not exhibit signs of ocl hetion. Rather must they obey the Latin proverb "Be silent and pass for a philosopher."

At Montmartre, with all the windows open late at night, the music cannot be heard on the street. In the East Sixties where many supper clubs are hidden away there is the quiet of the cathedral. Doormen do not stand out front. They peek out of cracks in the door.

In this new jazz order, raids have diminished. It is true now and then there is a stir at the entrance. Into the room rapidly walks a man with derby in hand casting hurried glances at various tables. As he departs there are cynical smiles. He represents the law.

Harry Van Hoven, of Carlin's Park, Baltimore honored me with Press Pass No. 2 at his resort "for developing the alert paragraph to its highest plane and fullest meaning." Henry Mencken gets Pass No. 1 for his review of "Babbitt." A spirit of jealousy prompts me to mention Mr. Mencken. Each time I mention him it costs him $1 for clippings from a press bureau. Pass No. 1 for me would have saved him this.

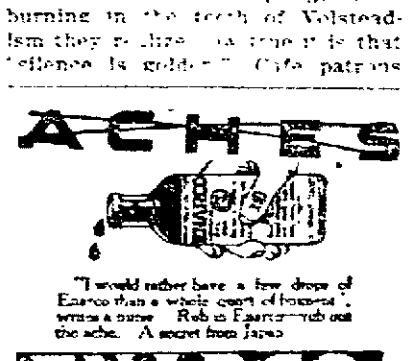

Just when I am convinced there is no romance left in the world, I find a glowing spire. Such for instance as the artist in Harlem's Black Belt of "The Alkezam of Alabam." Under his name on the gilt sign hanging from his window was "lion tamer, doctor of medicine and magic, chemist and patron of the arts." When the sick came to him he touched off a red powder and shouted "Pain, meet yo doom."

There is another specialist in the Black Belt who has an engaging sign. It reads "Do you crave to be kinkless? So Me My motto is Straight as an arrow."

I don't believe there is any other city where courtesy pays such big dividends as in New York. The dearth of it makes it of such value. I have watched with interest a spic and span little dining place that opened in a street where I live. One evening I had dinner there. The prices were moderate and the food plain but good. The atmosphere of hospitality reigned. Now and then I have gone back because I felt at home. Soon they began to expand. It now seats three times the number it did at the start. It has established two branches, one uptown and one downtown. The owners are two young girls just out of finishing school who were suddenly thrown upon their own resources.

"We'll we only live so long anyhow," said Jake Moots, candydate fer sheriff, when told that th' office was a thankless job. We're beginnin' t' wonder what we'll have t' be thankful fer Thanksgivin'.

WALT MASON

FEAR

"I don't enjoy my motor car," said Charles Adolphus Squires, "although it glitters like a star and has four handsome tires. For always, always as I ride I'm fearing some mishap, into a ditch the bus may slide and spill my priceless map. The gas I carry may explode as I pursue my way, and strew my fragments down the road and up the verdant brae. I often lie awake o' nights and think up grisly scenes, where I collide with other wights, and smash our limousines. I see myself on stretcher borne from scenes of wreck and woe, while creditors stand round and mourn and ingle ... And fear is spoiling countless lives, the fear of dole ahead, like Charles Adolphus when he drives, we fake up things to dread. My nieces gambol by my door, they play with old dog Snip; they have no pimple, boil or sore, they're gay and full of pep. And I regard them with a sigh, with tears their sport I view, tomorrow all these girls may die, of mumps or Spanish flu. I have a dwelling, green and gray, the spooliest shack in town. "But storms will ruin it," I say, "or fire will burn it down." I wonder why we look for woe in every coming breeze, I wonder why we don't outgrow such dippy fears as these.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Much Interest Being Shown in the Large Number of Women Safely Carried Through the Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Following Letters Are Impressive

Owing to modern methods of living, few woman approach this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying and often painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, nervousness, headaches, melancholia and irritability are only a few of the symptoms incident to this trying period of a woman's life, and the following letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to overcome these abnormal conditions.

Fisherville, Ky. — "For several months I was under the doctor's care as he said my nervousness, chills, hot flashes and weakness was caused by the Change of Life, but I did not seem to get any better. I was not able to work and spent most of my time in bed. A friend called to see me and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I cannot tell you how much good the medicine did me, as I had such a hard time before taking it. I can only advise every woman passing through the Change of Life to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it did so much for me." - Mrs EDWARD B. NEAL, Star Route, Fisherville, Ky.

A Michigan Woman Helped

Ionia, Michigan. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had been under the doctor's care without any relief. A friend in Lansing, Mich., asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel fifty per cent better already. If any one in this condition doubts the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help them I will gladly answer their letters." — Mrs MAY W. HAHN, 537 N. Jefferson Street, Ionia, Mich.

A New York Woman Helped

Syracuse, N.Y. — "I was used up with nervousness, weakness and hot flashes so I could hardly keep around, and could not get out much on account of those awful prickly feelings. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helping another woman with symptoms like mine. My husband got some for me, and after taking it five months I can get around and even do my housework, washing and ironing included, and my friends can see what a change it has made in me." — Mrs. SIDNEY HUMPHREY, 820½ Burnet Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y.

Rum Runners Daringly Defiant of Dry Forces

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y., Sept. 12—"Bootleggers' Boulevard," over which rum runners dashed with their thirst-quenching cargoes, is shunned by "the profession" today as a result of the publicity and investigation brot about by the loose gun methods of prohibition agents in that territory.

But the flow of hootch still pours steadily across the border, with the bootleggers slipping down thru Champlain, over the "Pok-o'-Moonshine" highway, passing along placidly and unworried, while officialdom stands back, with its figurative arms folded.

Ten heavy trucks, springs sagging with cargoes of Canada been, crept at a snail's pace along the new "rum-runners' paradise." Eight touring cars, all heavily loaded, three of which made the run in broad daylight, dashed along briskly. This was the count made by a staff reporter in a vigil of less than twelve hours along the Pok-o'-Moonshine highway. That count was verified by a representative citizen of one of the towns on this route, who was with the reporter. It was also checked with the data of a State police officer, which was taken unofficially while he was engaged in traffic work in this section.

A few miles from Rouse's Point where the United States Custom House is located, is the town of Champlain. This town houses the most gigantic filling station now operating along the border. It is thinly cloaked by the blind of a legitimate business being conducted there.

So this is the blind that in two hours the reporter, a total stranger was able to negotiate for a load of beer supposedly to be picked up later in the night.

Into that filling station pours a stream of liquor over the boarder which is sufficient, as the reporter actually witnessed in one night, to fill ten trucks and eight touring cars. The rum runners take no risk with the border. They pick up the stuff on the United States side.

Then begins a trip down the trail—a run over a dirt road to Chazy, on over the Pok-o'-Moonshine trail to Elizabethtown, thence to Schroon Lake, and at that point worry ceases. Dond to Schroon Lake the trail extends From that point the State road carries the rum cars to Utica, Syracuse and the other meccas of the thirsty.

Here is one instance recounted to the reporter by citizens in the towns along that trail.

"I was driving home from Plattsburgh with my wife one night last week," said one man. "We ran into a booze caravan. There were about ten trucks, all running very slowly. The rum runners refused to let us pass until we had reached Plattsburgh. They said it was perfectly safe but they were taking no chances."

TERRIFYING

lapse and fall with a racket that could be heard for miles around How I pulled thru alive is more than I can understand, for the Imperial hotel came down like a thousand tons of brick Through some divine kindness, I wasn't hurt at all by any of the falling wreckage even tho I was virtually buried in a mountain of debris. After some real hard work I managed to bore my way out and reached the open street. Fires were going full blast everywhere. They seemed to have started with same horrible suddenness.

"The confusion was simply beyond description. I stayed in one of the parks for several hours, huddled right in with the terror stricken natives

"Somehow I got started into the general direction of Yokohama, and kept on going. Most of the distance was covered on foot, but now and then I would be lucky enough to hire a rikshaw for a mile or two.

"Along the route from Tokio to Yokohama, I saw thousands and thousands of fleeing refugees. Many injured were dying by the wayside without the slightest medical assistance. It was impossible to give aid to them. Everything was in a state of uncontrollable pandemonium.

"Great fissures were opened along several stretches of the road I followed and in these I saw several refugees dying - apparently from injuries they received when they fell into the deep earth fissures.

"I reached Yokohama Sunday morning and found the great sea port engulfed in a whirlwind of flames The whole water front was flooded with burning oil sprayed from exploding tanks of the Standard Oil Co and the Rising Sun Co

"It was hours before I was able to get into a sampan and be taken out to the steamer Steel Navigator which was anchored in the harbor outside of the danger zone of oil covered water. Together with a crowd of other refugees I was taken to Kobe and from that port I finally got passage to Shanghai

"I am indeed surprised that my hair didn't turn gray"

Murphy is a salesman of seismological equipment and had just completed an inspection of this kind of appartus at the Imperial University of Tokio

Other refugees report terrifying experiences with robbers, looters and vandals who held sway in the devastated areas shortly after the great catastrophe.

Many foreigners escaped from the great catastrophe only to meet death from bandits who preyed upon them on the roads leading out of Tokio and Yokohama.

J. P. D. Mollison, a prominent British merchant was one of the victims of a robber band, according to stories told by refugees here today. While fleeing out of Tokio, Mollison was held up and murdered by Japanese bandits. Mollison [illegible] had a narrow escape from a falling building.

At the business session The Hessian Fly Menace was discussed all farmers present signifying a willingness to sow their wheat this fall during the fly-free dates Several men told of successfully combatting the fly by sowing during the fly-free period several years ago and stated that their yields had, in most instances, been higher when they observed this period.

Deputy state master Herley Miller attended the meeting and urged Franklin grangers to prepare good exhibits and take advantage of the premiums being offered to granges at the Coshocton fair in October. He also asked Franklin grange to train a degree team and be ready to compete for the silver cup to be awarded to the best team in the county at the Pomona meeting to be held in Coshocton the first Saturday in December.

take a hand in financial matters in cooperation with the high commission."

Asked if this was the beginning of a movement for a Rhinish republic, M. Tirard replied

"France feels that this is a question for the Rhinelanders to decide. All I can say now is that a considerable part of the Rhinish people want to take their fate in their own hands."

The French believe that passive resistance has weakened the morale of the German workers. It is claimed furthermore that German propaganda had been making the ground more fertile for the establishment of a Rhineland republic. The newspapers which apparently favor the detachment of the Rhineland, said editorially

"Many of the German magnates are [illegible] with dizziness as the mark continues its death dance. They are beginning to whisper to themselves 'May be it would have been better if we had paid reparations instead of inviting occupation.' But while the employers are yielding the workers cling to passive resistance."

Christianity Urged as Panacea for Europe's Political Troubles

(By LUTHER A. HUSTON)

LONDON, Sept 12. — "What Europe needs to have peace is a kindlier, more Christ-like spirit among its people," according to Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago, wife of the former United States Senator from Illinois.

"Europe would accomplish more toward the settlement of its problems if it would talk less and work more," in the opinion of Mrs. Jacob Bauer, also if Chicago, who is one of the most successful business women in the United States.

Both Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Bauer are spending the summer in Europe. Primarily they are here to derive pleasure from a season in the Old World, but both are keenly interested in efforts being made to restore peace and end the political and industrial chaos that has prevailed since the war and which now threatens another crisis in European affairs. They have lost no opportunity to gain first hand information upon existing conditions.

"It is shocking to see the jealousies and the flaming hatreds that still prevail among the nations of Europe," said Mrs. Lewis. "It is these jealousies and hatreds that are keeping alive the spirit of war and preventing a settlement of the pressing problems of the world.

"It is surprising to note the degree of retrogression from the high ideals that were uppermost during the war. Selfish national interests seem to have crowded out all ideas of mutual co-operation to bring about a return to international sanity.

"I cannot help feeling that all of Europe's problems are soluble if the leaders and the people of the several nations would manifest a genuine desire for compromise. I think the real solution lies in a more general application of the principles of Christianity to international affairs. The Ten Commandments would seem to me to be the best basis for international [illegible]

Mrs. Bauer, being a practical business woman, is a firm believer in the gospel of hard work as the best remedy for the world's troubles.

MORE ACTION NEEDED

"The trouble is that folks spend too much time in talking and not enough in doing. Ideas are necessary, and it is all right to talk about them but unless they are executed they have no value. The problems that Europe faces are certainly capable of solution if those who are trying to settle them will get down to business and look at things in a reasonable light.

"I'm an optimist and firmly believe that ultimately a solution will be found, and everything will come out all right But steps should be taken immediately to put an end to disturbed international conditions Just talking about it and exchanging notes will not do it."

So far as the effect of disturbed conditions in Europe on American business is concerned, Mrs. Bauer believes it is more psychological than material

Mrs Lewis does not believe that the sentiment of a majority of the American people is predominantly pro-French, pro-British or pro-European in anything.

"There is the greatest contrast," she said, "between Europe and America in the way the people feel about things. Americans, I think, really do not care much about what happens in Europe They respond quickly to any situation that touches their hearts. Relief work appeals to them because it is something they can do and their ready sympathy goes out to fellow men who are in actual distress.

U. S. INTEREST SLIGHT

"It is very difficult for anyone, however, to maintain a constant interest in the affairs of a neighbor who is 3,000 miles away. Things that happen in Europe touch the life of the average American so remotely that his concern about them is purely casual. When I return from abroad people ask me 'How's Europe?' but before I can tell them they start talking about prohibition or some other domestic affair that is closer to their hearts. Their interest in Europe is really not vital

"Every European I meet, however, seems to be personally interested in European affairs and utterly at a loss to understand the seeming indifference of the Americans to conditions on this side of the water."

Even those Americans who come to Europe with the announced intention of investigating and learning at first hand what conditions really are seldom go home with any accurate knowledge of the real situation, according to Mrs. Lewis

"Many Americans come over here eager to learn," she said, "but when they get here they become interested in such a diversity of things and find the opportunities for having an enjoyable time so numerous that they forget their purpose and go home without any really accurate insight into European problems."

Let Mosquito Finish with His Meal and It Won't Hurt, Expert Advises

LONDON, Sept. 12. — Next time that mosquito settles on your hand let it sting you and watch it doing its very best to raise the biggest bump on your body before giving it the coup de grace.

The above pungent and inspiring advice is given gratis by Professor Harold Maxwell-Lefroy, one of England's greatest entomologists, who maintains that it is the best and only way to lessen the inflammation caused by a mosquito bite.

Lefroy's watchword is apparently "be patient with the mosquito," for he would have the mosquito finish its meal before being swatted.

"The irritation of a sting," says the professor, "is usually caused by the mosquito being disturbed before he has completed his meal.

"If he alights on ones hand it is best to leave him there until he is about to fly away. Then, and then only, should he be swatted, and it will be found that the after effects will be slight.

"When we examine the feeding process of the mosquito this is not so paradoxical as would at first appear. Having fixed his proboscis to the skin, the mosquito proceeds to bore a hole and to pump in his poisonous saliva.

"The effect of this poison is to cause the blood cells to swell, so providing a quicker supply of blood. If left alone the mosquito will draw out not only the blood, but most of the poison as well.

"Irritation only sets in when he is disturbed and does not complete the drawing out process."
